

SKILL DEVELOPMENT WORKSHOP

on

Data Analysis – Need of Current Economy

November 22-23, 2019

Organized by

Skill Development Cell & Department of Economics
GURU GHASIDAS VISHWAVIDYALAYA,
Bilaspur (Chhattisgarh), India.

Background

Economic data is primarily a collection of information on various important aspects of a country's economy. These economic data are brought out in definite intervals by authorities responsible for such functions. These organizations are basically statistical institutions that are employed by Governments or similar administrative bodies to provide economic data for a certain period of time.

Excel, the spreadsheet program that is a part of Microsoft popular office software package, is a favored tool for managing, analyzing and reporting economic data. With its user friendly features, including chart wizard and data analysis capacity, excel is a popular medium in many principles of economics courses for introducing students to basic data analysis. Many data sets exist in excel-ready formats for students to get hands-on experience applying economic theories and concepts.

Objectives of the Workshop

1. Basic skills for handling the spreadsheet program
2. The basic analysis of Economic data.
3. Hands on experience for applying economic theories.
4. Learning of favored tools for managing, tabulation and interpretations of Economic data.
5. Skill development in handling computers.
